Run: 1465

Date: 15th March 2019

Hare: Maussie and Call Girl

VENUE: Winthrop Park, Winthrop

THE CIRCLE: 50 Hashers turned up on this hot humid night, we were all so sweaty by the end of the event it seemed we had come together for one big group intimate close quarters exercise event, S#X. It was a well thought out run taking in many aspects of Winthrop, from it's up to date architecture to its more retro art side, including some hidden gems which D Cell discovered more of the following day when she returned to look for her house keys. The GM commented that tonight we seemed to have our largest running contingent for some time, for once almost equalling the number of walkers, some walkers were even tempted by the course to run in some sections.

Hogshit was called to review for the runners, he thought the trail was fantastic, incorporating the old pine plantation with the urban sprawl, however it could have done with some more falls trails to keep the runners a bit more together. The trail earned a score of 9.75

Cookie, reviewed for the walkers, she thought the walk was just as fantastic for the walkers as it was for the runners, she particularly enjoyed the incorporation of the lakes in Winthrop, earning a score of 9.9.

Visitors and LTNS: No visitors this week, we welcomed back Cookie and Sir Fumbles, along with Cowpat and Rockbottom

CHARGES: The RA charged Maussie for no trail in some areas, and for switching between road, curbing and path for the farrows.

Tightarse was charged by the GM for losing the trail, and Radar added to the charge by accusing Tightarse of following the wrong people, who in his defence were in the same area and were using also using torches.

The RA issued an accolade to Buttered Buns for being smarter than most and deciding to put away her jacket before embarking on the trail, as once on it everyone soon worked up a sweat.

Call Girl was charged by the GM for “needing a man” at the drink stop, while many began to question if Maussie was no longer good enough for her, Call Girl was quick to clarify she was merely looking for him to open the champagne. Cowpat attempted to assist in the clarification of the issue, however resulted in her being charged to adding more confusion to the matter.

The RA charged a few hashers for having run number quirks, with Phantom being 1234, Slugger on 424 and Sadar on 494 were charged for having Book Ends.

The GM gave an accolade Gaylord and Buttered Buns for making up this week and sticking together, whilst last week Gaylord took off leaving Buttered Buns all alone.

High Beam achieved 500 runs, and shared the milestone with Slugger, Crusher, Dead Squid, and Sadar

Ballwrinkle charged 15MeNuts for taking away his fifteen minutes of fame when she wrote the wrong name when writing up the rag a couple of weeks ago, for when he stood in as acting RA

GENERAL BUSINESS: Rambling proudly announced that The Blue Dress Run had raised in excess, and growing, $1200.

BIRTHDAYS: none officially this week, Pacemaker stood in and took one for St Patrick being St Patricks Day

DUMMY SHORTS: Beau struggled for nominees, with the help of the gathered group he had D Cell for loosing her keys, Dead Squid nominated Beau for his rather fetching high socks, and Hogshit nominated Maussie for temporarily misplacing his keys.

D Cell was the winner, and she eagerly assisted Beau to get his pants off and she couldn't wait to get into them. She later regretted her eagerness and Beau had made them rather wet, we all wondered what they were wet from JOKERS: Cookie came back to the rescue after being away with a joke about a Dairy Farmer needing a Bull to service his cows. Rambling told a very amusing tale about a health inspector finding out how the pattern on pies are made. Cookie finished off with another joke about the driver's reaction to smashing his Porsche.
