SCRIBE NOTES - Run 1792, 9.1.26

Inspector Gadget, Fremantle City Football Club, Walton Way, Beaconsfield.

Twenty six hashers gathered on a perfect evening for hashing, causing some odd looks from some young lads as they left training. The hare sent us on our way into the brightening sunset, and we met White Pointer coming across the oval to bring our number to 27. Light My Fire took the chalk to help the walkers avoid the full trail. A scenic run through Beaconsfield brought us to a welcome port and lemonade/chocs and lollies drink stop – marked by creative use of the stop sign painted on the footpath for the schoolkids. It was a short step to home from there.

Stand-In GM, Rock Bottom, welcomed us to her first circle in “quite some time”. She’s still got it!

Phantom commented for the runners – 4.6km of well-marked trail, never saw the walkers, scored 9.5

Dynamo for the walkers – very good, lovely sunset, 9.5

After a rousing rendition of the Hare Song, Inspector Gadget was kept in the circle for his birthday down down and the Birthday Song.

Never Hard was serenaded with In Heaven There is No Beer to welcome him as a LTNS. He’s back to enjoy some Aussie summer.

RA’s first charge was to award ClockWork Orange the Jabber Jaws for being overly chatty on the run. She had plenty to say to her running mates about her trip to Malaysia – apparently didn’t hash, but had plenty of sex!

White Pointer was charged for his late arrival, and not wearing a Hash shirt. He was wearing a Hills Hash shirt, and his excuse for being tardy was the state of our public transport system, but he was Publicly Pissed on nevertheless.

Animule was charged with arriving at the drink stop from a different direction than everyone else – was he lost? No! Just short-cutting as usual.

Inspector Gadget was charged for being related to the original tax collectors, his family line dating back to 1799 when income tax was introduced in Britain. Sheep Shunter set his charge to a limerick (which I was not quick enough to catch). A flurry of limericks followed from the circle.

Charges from the circle were then called for:

Mental Disorder charged Menstrual Disorder for not knowing her left from her right when navigating – he was on his phone instead of paying attention himself, so the charge was reversed.

Troppo charged Mental Disorder with failing to keep Dos in check – he had all the park to crap in, but put it right next to Troppo's car. Come on Trop, it was only a little pooh!

Mountain Hawk charged Radar with providing a list of song prompts to assist as stand-in Song Mistress, as requested. Must be an accolade, not a charge!

Bookends/Zero Heroes: Wenchy, TightArse, Sir Fumbles, Mel Adjusted

Jokers: TightArse went to a blind prostitute, and she said that he had the biggest penis that she had ever felt, but she was only pulling his leg.

Troppo's mum died because she didn't get her blood transfusion in time, even though she kept telling him to be positive

Inspector Gadget told us about a lady who returned a defective toaster, but was refused a refund, so wanted her nipples pinched.

Dummy Shorts: Not here tonight, carryover for GPS

GB: Radar had the following to announce –

Yo's surgery went well, currently in SJOG Subiaco, well-wishes sent via

Lofty

Sherbie's passing – everyone was aware and sent condolences to Lofty and Yo
